This chapter focuses on the Android client available for ownCloud. There is also an app for iPhones and iPads that works in a similar way. The main functions of the Android application are: Browsing files and folders Downloading and browsing files Uploading videos and photos from the phone to the server Ability to set a security password You can download the ownCloud client mobile application from the Google Play Store or install it through the F-Droid store. Downloading the application from the Google Play store is paid, but F-Droid does not charge for the application. Using F-Droid instead of Google Play has other advantages: F-Droid respects your privacy. They do not track you or your devices. All apps in the F-Droid store are free and open source software. All apps are ad-free (unless you allow ads) and cannot track you (unless you allow tracking). Install F-Droid at the end of this section. Using the ownCloud Client for Android First, add the server address - this is the web address of your ownCloud instance. The app tries to establish a connection - if successful, you'll see either Secure connection available or Secure connection not available. If the application cannot connect, you will be notified with red text: in this case, please check the URL and try again. Then enter the username and password you normally use to access your own cloud and click Connect. You are now logged in and have access to your cloud. What you see on your phone syncs with what's in the cloud. The menu gives access to various functions, including refresh (which will be re-synced) to create and upload a directory. Client security In Menu > Settings you can set a PIN code to protect your cloud. This means that if someone steals your phone or finds it unlocked, there is another password to protect your data. To add this password: Click, enter and confirm the application PINFrom now on you will have to enter this PIN every time you open the client. Installing the OmaCloud Android client on F-Droid To install the ownCloud client with F-Droid, make sure you have enabled third-party app installation under Settings > Apps. Then scan the QR code below and select Open browser. Click on the big Download F-Droid button. When the download is complete, click Install. Click Open: You are now in the F-Droid Store. You can also download the ownCloud client application. Click the menu, and then select Search. Enter ownCloud and click Go.
