Our "Hot Dog" pillowcase method will have you making professional looking pillowcases with no raw edges in only 3 seams!Materials Required: 3/4 yd focus fabric for body of pillowcase 1/8 yd (cut to 2" x WOF) for optional accent trim If you are adding the optional accent trim, cut a 2" x WOF strip and press in half with wrong sides together. On your table, layer your cuff fabric face up [this is the "bun"], the optional trim strip with the raw edges toward the top, and your pillowcase fabric face down. If you are using a directional print, make sure you pin the BOTTOM of the fabric. The left side of this photo shows the layers in the proper order. The right side shows all the layers even and pinned along the top edge. Don't worry about the selvages. We'll take care of that later. Just line up everything even on the left side and let the right side be uneven. Roll or fold up the pillowcase body fabric [this is the hot dog], stopping just below the pin points along the top edge, leaving the cuff fabric flat on the table. Bring the lower edge of the cuff fabric up to the pinned edge and pin all 4 layers together (cuff, trim, body, cuff), making sure that your "hot dog" is out of the way of the pinned seam. This is what your rolled up and pinned "hot dog" should look like. Take your "hot dog" to your machine and sew the raw edge with a 1/4" seam. Once you have sewn your cuff/trim/body seam, you'll need to turn it right side out. Pull the cuff fabric with your left hand while pulling out the body fabric with your right hand. Once everything is right side out, you will have a completely enclosed cuff seam. Press the cuff flat with your iron, keeping the trim pointed towards the body of the pillowcase. If you chose to include the optional trim piece, and you want to topstitch it down - now is the time. Now you need to clean up the selvedge edges. On your cutting mat, fold your pillowcase in half matching the raw edge of the pillowcase body to the folded edge of the cuff. Cut the selvages off both sides. It's time to sew the first part of a French seam. This will encase the raw edges of your pillowcase. Fold your pillowcase in half lenthwise [wrong sides together], and sew the edge and the bottom with a 1/4" seam, pivoting in the corner. Trim the corners and turn your pillowcase wrong side out. Press the folds of the seams. Sew a 3/8"or 1/2" seam over the original 1/4" seam, again pivoting in the corner, making sure that you are completely enclosing the original 1/4" seam allowance. Voila! You're finished! Turn your pillowcase right side out and press! Wasn't that easy??? Not only are our 3D designs unique, lifelike, and vibrant, but the fabric we use is ultra-soft. New subtotal: £0.00 GBP Several months ago, the company I worked for asked for volunteers to help make a hot dog pillowcase for the Minneapolis branch of Ryan's Case for Smiles - a nonprofit group helping children cope with treatment for cancer and other serious illnesses.I know I've mentioned before that I'm not much of a sewer (sewist?). I can barely sew a straight line, so I've only dabbled in sewing - making a pencil roll case, coasters (we still use these!), a shirt for myself, and even a mermaid tail. One year I made some quilt blocks: Friendship Star and Borders, my favorite: Churn Dash, and an occasional failure, although they never made it past the single block stage. However, the hot dog pillowcase pattern I received seemed simple enough that I wanted to give it a try.Unfortunately, the instructions I received looked like they were a copy of a copy ... black and white pictures and enough re-copies to make it fuzzy. It also had some odd measurements that didn't quite make sense after I had made one. So I decided to make my own tutorial to share with you!You will need two pieces of 100% cotton quilting fabric:The main fabric or "hot dog" needs to be 27" (3/4 yard, 68 cm).The "cuff" or "bun" fabric needs to be 9" (1/4 yard, 23 cm).Choose fabrics that coordinate well, but especially if you are making these for charity, keep them bright and fun - especially kid-friendly patterns.Of course... I picked chickens!! My cuff fabric is an unknown stash find -which was actually a little thick, but worked ok since it was just used on the cuff. The chicken fabric is Rooster Rainbow by Daphne Brissonnet (licensed by Wild Apple).Note: There are some hot dog pillowcase (aka "burrito" pillowcase) instructions on the web that actually call for 3 pieces of fabric (with "mustard"), but I wanted to make mine as simple as possible. The same concept applies, but you need to factor in a third piece when pinning, rolling and sewing. Maybe someday I'll try that version! I found a great tutorial at The Quilt Asylum.If you plan to make these for charity, go ahead and buy a yard of each and then you can have alternating pillowcases (the cuff of one is the main fabric of the other). See my note at the bottom about how to choose patterned fabric!Update: I forgot to mention this step. Be sure you WASH your fabrics before you begin!! This is especially important if you are using bright colors or strong contrasting colors. I didn't do this for the animal fabric and black trim pillowcases shown above, and the black ended up bleeding after the first wash. Save yourself the headache and wash first!You will cut each of these to a width of 41" (104 cm) - "ish". Standard US pillows are 20" wide so this will allow for ease of slipping the pillowcases on. I have made them with a width of 40 1/2" (I would say this is the absolute minimum) and 42-44" (a bit baggy). If you are making a queen or king size pillow, or live outside the US, determine the measurements of your pillow, multiple by 2 and add at least 1" (2.5 cm) to determine the width (size: 70 cm = fabric width = (70 x 2) + 2.5 = 143 cm)Place the cuff fabric down on the table, right side up, with a long edge at the top.Lay the main fabric down over the cuff, right side down, matching up the two long edges. Pin temporarily to secure.Now, roll up the the main fabric into a roll. You will need to keep this relatively small in size so it will fit inside the bun. Stop when you have reached approximately 2" (5 cm) from the top.Bring the bottom edge of the cuff up and over the "hot dog" until the long edge meets the pinned long edge. Pin all three layers in place, making sure the "hot dog" stays away from edge so you don't end up pinning it in place or later sewing it into the seam.As you can see, this forms the hot dog (main fabric) and the bun (cuff) in this hot dog pillowcase method. Confused how this all comes together?! Just wait for the magic!Sew a 3/8" (1 cm) seam along the top edge. The picture actually shows a 1/2" (1.25 cm) seam. Either one is actually fine, but keep in mind if you use that third accent fabric, you may need to keep your seam small.Now comes the magic...On one end of the "bun", reach in and start pulling out the "hot dog".It will take a little effort to gently pull all the fabric out. You can see how it starts out looking like a mess (picture 1), where it starts to look like this will work (2) and finished (3)!Once the fabrics are separated, press the seam between the cuff and main fabric.The next step I'm going to show you is entirely optional. You could turn the fabrics with right sides together and seam the side and bottom to complete the pillowcase. However, I'm going to show you how to make a French seam, so there are no "raw" edges!With wrong sides together, fold in half so the cuff ends line up together. Pin and sew a 1/4" (.6 cm) seam all the way down the side and along the bottom. This needs to be a tiny seam for the next step to work. As you sew, create rounded corners by pivoting the fabric. You will need to do this for both bottom corners - but still keep the seam width small.If it helps, you can use a pencil or fabric marker to draw lines where you want the seam to go.Turn the pillowcase inside out and repeat the seam along the edge and bottom, but this time make it a 1/2" (1.25 cm). This is another piece of "magic". Making the larger seam encapsulates the smaller seam so the raw edges are completely hidden!Well, sometimes. This is where the thicker fabric worked against me and there was one spot on the cuff where the edge peeked through. Not enough to be highly noticeable though.Turn the pillowcase right-side out again and press the seams. Wash before use.We have a finished pillowcase!Here is where you get to see my other "oops". Which way are the roosters facing? Not what I had intended. My thought was that they would have their heads aligned with mine, but the way the 1-yard fabric was positioned, that didn't work. Something to keep in mind when you are picking out your fabric!That's ok. I'm still very happy with my rooster / chicken pillowcase. (And no, this one is NOT for charity LOL).If you make a hot dog pillowcase, I'd love to see or hear about it! Just comment below - or send me an email!
