A multimedia center for your mobile device Play every mobile video format using one single app Enjoy videos and content from South Korea Download any video on the Internet in HD A multimedia video center on your Android device Every soccer match online and for free The best way to stream your videos Listen to music on your phone with improved quality A media player is kind of a weird term these days. It's a generic term for an app that plays media. However, there are people looking for apps that play both music and video in the same app in order to save space and time. This list is for those people. We do have a dedicated video player app list as well as a music player app list if you just need one or the other. Here are the best media player apps for Android. ASD Music and Video Player is a fairly standard media player. It supports most popular video and audio formats along with some extras. The other features include a bass boost and equalizer along with Wear OS support, a decent file browser, theming, and more. It won't blow anybody's mind, but it does what it sets out to do and it does so rather well. The ads are a bit annoying and we'd like to see a premium version of this in the future. Otherwise, it's good. MediaMonkey is an excellent music player with video playing capabilities. Most of its features are music-focused. However, you can absolutely watch video content with it. Additionally, MediaMonkey has a desktop variant for PC that also lets you view music and video content and sync content between your computer and phone. It supports most music and video formats along with some extras like audiobooks and podcasts. The app also has a widget, Android Auto support, Chromecast support, a sleep timer, and some other features. This one is quite good if you want a full-featured music player with video player capabilities. MiXplorer Silver is a file browser with built-in media capabilities. To be fair, most file browsers have the ability to play video or audio content. However, MiXplorer Silver goes a step further with VLC media codecs giving it support for most video and audio formats. Plus, it's actually a good file browser with plenty of other features as well, including native PDF support and even support for some ebooks. This is an all-in-one kind of solution if you need something like that, but it'll absolutely play media files without a problem most of the time. Price: Free / $0.99 / $3.99 per monthPlex is an excellent media player app. However, it doesn't play media all on its own. The app lets you set up a server on your home computer and it streams media from your home computer to your phone. You can watch the media on your phone or cast to a Chromecast if you want to. This serves a lot of purposes, but mainly it frees up space on your phone by letting you store everything on a separate machine. It's a little more complicated to set up than most options on the list, but it works well all the same and it supports any media format your computer supports. VLC is one of the most popular Android media players. It is famous for its vast codec support and you can even watch DVD ISOs with this app along with online streams, most music codecs, and all kinds of other media files. MediaMonkey is a music player with the capacity to watch video. VLC is kind of the same, but it's a video player with the capacity to listen to music. We recommend VLC for those who need a focus on video and MediaMonkey for those who need a focus on music. The VLC media player, with its support for almost every codec, video and audio format, and platform, is one of the best media players you can get. The app even lets you stream content from a PC if you use VLC on other devices. Here's how to stream video and audio from the VLC media player. Read more: The best media players for Android QUICK ANSWER To stream from the VLC media player, you must set up a network stream URL, an address you can enter on other devices to stream the video from the source computer. Check out the detailed step-by-step guide below. JUMP TO KEY SECTIONS How to stream from the VLC media player Open a stream in VLC How to stream from the VLC media playerAnkit Banerjee / Android AuthorityYou can set up a video or audio stream using the VLC media player on a Windows PC to play media on another computer, phone, or smart TV. It's a slightly complicated process, though. To start, open the VLC media player, open the Media tab at the top left corner, and click on Stream. You can also open the Stream settings using the Ctrl + S shortcut. Go to the File tab, click on Add to select the media file you want to stream, and click on Stream. Click Next. Check and confirm the source file on the next page.Ankit Banerjee / Android AuthorityYou can also enable Display locally if you want the streamed file to play on the source computer. You will then have to set up the destination settings. Select HTTP from the New destination dropdown. Click on Add.Ankit Banerjee / Android AuthorityYou can set the port number, but the default (8080) works too. Note the port number since you'll need this information to connect to the stream on the other device. You can leave the path section as is too.If you want to specify only one device you want to stream to, you can type its IP address in the section without removing the "/." If you add the IP address of another device, it will look like /192.168.1.1, as an example. If you leave the path as is, you can use the stream network address on any device on the same Wi-Fi/LAN network. Click Next.Ankit Banerjee / Android AuthorityUnder Transcoding options, uncheck Activate transcoding. You will have to choose a codec option using the Profile dropdown. Click Next once you make your selection. I've succeeded with Video - h.264 + MP3 (TS), Video for MPEG4 1080p, and Video for Android HD (to stream to my phone). If you notice any audio or video glitches, try a different codec.Ankit Banerjee / Android AuthorityWhen you get to the additional options on the next page, enable Stream all elementary streams. Click on Stream to begin playing the video and start the stream. Pause the video until you set up the stream on your other device.The steps are similar on a Mac but are named a little differently. Go to the File tab > Streaming/exporting wizard > Stream to network. Choose the video or audio file you want to stream under Select a stream. On the next page, select HTTP and note the port number. You can leave the destination (path) blank. Uncheck both the Audio and Video settings in the Transcode options. Under Encapsulation format, select MPEG TS. Click Next and then, Finish. Open a stream in VLCAnkit Banerjee / Android AuthorityNow that you have the stream ready to go from your source computer, you can access it on any device on the same Wi-Fi/LAN network. If you have a dual-band Wi-Fi router, ensure the two devices are on the same band. You will also need to know the IP address of the source computer. Go to What's my IP address on the source PC to find.You should first download the VLC media player to open the stream on another device. The steps can be slightly different depending on the device you are trying to stream to. But the network stream URL will be the same — http://(your source computer IP address):(port number). So, as an example, the network stream URL could look like . Stream to a Windows PC: Open the VLC media player, click on the Media tab, and go to Open network stream. Type in the network stream URL and click on Play. Stream to a Mac: Go to the File tab, click on Network, and type in the network stream URL. Stream to a phone: Open the VLC app and go to the More tab. Tap on New stream and enter the stream URL. Stream to a smart TV: Download the VLC media player app. You will find it in the Google Play Store for Android TV and Roku and under the Find function on a Fire TV. Scroll down to Stream and enter the network stream URL. You won't need to download the VLC media player on an Android TV with Chromecast built-in or if you have a Chromecast. To stream from VLC to a Chromecast/Android TV, go to the Playback tab, open Renderer, and select your listed Chromecast device. Make sure that both devices are on the same network. Read more: The best music players for your PC FAQs How do I stream from VLC to my (smart device/media player/phone/computer/tablet)?As long as you can download VLC on your device, you will be able to stream media from a computer to that device. After downloading the app, go to Stream and enter the network stream URL. Can I stream from VLC using an Android or iOS device?Yes, but only to a Chromecast or smart TV with Chromecast built-in. Play the video on your phone's VLC media player app and look for the cast icon at the top right corner. Make sure that the Chromecast device is on and on the same Wi-Fi network as the phone. How to fix stream not playing?If the stream doesn't play as expected, it might be a settings issue. Change the codec/stream format to see if the video starts playing or if the quality improves. This might take some trial and error, but I have used MPEG and TS streams with no problems.
