

I'm not a robot

Cpa exam score release schedule

The 2025 CPA Exam features continuous testing for core sections, offering flexibility in scheduling exams. In contrast, discipline sections have designated testing windows: January 1-31 (March 14 score release), April 1-30 (May 1 score release), July 1-31 (September 11 score release), and October 1-31 (December 16 score release). The CPA Exam has a set schedule that allows candidates to choose specific exam dates for certain sections, such as January, April, July, and October. These dates should be chosen between the first and last day of each month. For core sections like FAR, AUD, and REG, continuous testing is available, giving more flexibility. It's essential to book these exams in advance to secure your preferred date. In addition to exam scheduling, it's also crucial to keep track of score release dates: March 14, May 1, September 11, and October 31. These dates follow the respective testing windows. For the 2025 CPA Exam, expect scores to be released on March 14, May 16, July 17, September 11, and December 16. If you take the exam in January, your score will arrive by March 14. April's scores will be available on May 16, while July's testing window scores will be released on September 11, followed by October's scores on December 16. Staying informed about these score release dates is vital for effective planning as a candidate. Understanding the schedule for score release dates is essential for CPA candidates aiming to stay on track in their preparation. For the 2025 CPA exam, score release dates are strategically aligned with the testing windows, ensuring timely feedback. Each Discipline section benefits from a shorter score release timeline compared to previous years, enhancing your ability to assess your performance swiftly. Staying aware of these score release dates will help you effectively plan your study schedule and next steps. The CPA Exam features both continuous testing for core sections and designated windows for discipline sections, making it easier to plan your study and test dates. Core Sections (FAR, AUD, REG) are available year-round for continuous testing, while Discipline Sections are administered in January, April, July, and October. Scores for Discipline sections are released within weeks after testing, ensuring you can manage your exam preparation effectively and pass three sections while receiving timely feedback on your exam scores. Keeping these dates in mind as you plan your CPA journey! The structured testing windows for the 2025 CPA Exam significantly influence candidates' preparation strategies and overall experience. With testing windows occurring during the first month of each quarter, you can better align your study schedules with the exam dates. For instance, the January window runs from January 1-31, followed by score release dates on March 14, allowing for timely performance feedback. Similar timelines apply to the April and July testing windows. Staying informed about these score release dates will help you plan your next steps effectively as a candidate. The new CPA Evolution exam, launching in January 2024, marks a significant shift towards a more structured testing approach, reducing uncertainty and stress for candidates. The exam will consist of three core sections: FAR, AUD, and REG, and two discipline sections (BAR, ISC, or TCP), allowing candidates to choose their focus based on career goals. The CPA Evolution incorporates technology and data analytics, making it more relevant and engaging for candidates. With multiple testing windows throughout the year and timely score release dates, the exam aims to enhance accessibility and allow candidates to navigate their preparation and testing on their terms. Effective exam preparation requires a strategic approach, involving 300-500 hours of studying, time management strategies, practice exams, and simulations. Joining study groups or enrolling in review courses can provide invaluable support and motivation. Regularly assessing progress through practice test results enables targeted preparation efforts. The CPA Exam will change in 2025, with multiple testing windows for core sections and discipline sections following specific monthly schedules. Scores will be based on uniform standards set by the AICPA. The 30-month rule allows candidates to keep passing scores for up to 30 months, providing flexibility. To succeed in the 2025 CPA Exam, candidates must carefully plan and stay organized, taking into account testing windows and score release dates. Staying informed and reducing anxiety can improve chances of success. Understanding the new format of the Certified Public Accountant (CPA) Exam is crucial for aspiring CPAs. With the introduction of CPA Evolution, the exam now consists of three Core Exams and one Discipline Exam. Each section has a unique target score release date in 2025. The exact dates are as follows: * For the Core sections: * January 23 * February 7 * February 14 * February 25 * March 9 * March 18 * March 31 * April 9 * April 23 * May 8 * May 16 * May 28 * June 8 * June 17 * June 30 * July 10 * July 23 * August 7 * August 15 * September 7 * September 16 * September 30 * October 9 * October 23 * November 7 * November 15 * November 25 * December 8 * December 16 * December 31 * January 13 * For the Discipline sections: * January 1 - 31 * March 14 * April 1 - 30 * June 1 - 30 * May 16 * July 17 * July 1 - 31 * September 11 * October 1 - 31 * December 16 Given article text here CPA Exam format changes bring welcome updates for candidates, including continuous testing for Core sections and revised scoring structure. Starting in 2025, the Core section of the exam (FAR, AUD, and REG) will offer continuous testing, allowing candidates more flexibility in scheduling their exams. This change enables candidates to pace their exam preparation according to their personal and professional commitments, resulting in faster score release dates. The Discipline sections (BAR, ISC, and TCP) will follow a similar testing window schedule as 2024, but with reduced time between taking the exam and receiving scores. It's crucial for candidates to plan strategically when choosing the order of taking the CPA Exam, ensuring an effective study schedule and accommodating personal plans and licensing timelines. Jurisdictions have approved a Credit Extension policy, granting an 18-month extension to candidates who passed at least one section of the CPA Exam before December 19, 2023. This means candidates will have until June 30, 2025 to pass all remaining sections without losing credit for earlier sections. A potential extension to 30 months is being considered, with the exam tracker reflecting any updates when jurisdictions make a decision. The accounting profession is evolving to prepare future CPAs for the dynamic business landscape. By synchronizing the skills required for licensure with those needed for today's CPA, the new model ensures candidates are better equipped to succeed in their careers. Meanwhile, NASBA and AICPA will continue refining and updating the CPA Exam, so it's essential to stay informed and adapt your preparation strategies accordingly. Becker collaborates closely with these organizations to keep our CPA Exam Review aligned with the exam format while offering support, resources, and guidance for a successful journey. Get insight into the 2025 CPA Exam guide, which provides an in-depth look at what you need to know. The guide includes an overview of the CPA Exam, comprehensive details on each section, including format, section items, scoring, and key content areas. It also covers choosing your discipline, do's and don'ts for exam preparation, study tips, and multiple-choice practice questions. The 2025 CPA Exam no longer has fixed testing windows; instead, it features continuous testing throughout the year with options available monthly. This change allows you to plan your study schedule around specific dates for each month. Key takeaways include the continuous testing windows, discipline section testing in January running from January 1-31, and scores released on March 14. As you prepare for the CPA Exam, it's crucial to stay aware of the specific testing dates that will shape your study schedule. In 2025, the CPA Exam features testing windows for discipline sections during the first month of each quarter: January, April, July, and October. The Core exam sections, AUD, FAR, and REG, are available with continuous testing throughout the year, providing flexibility in scheduling exams. Make sure to understand the 2025 schedule and adjust your preparation accordingly. Testing windows for the CPA Exam in 2025 include January, April, July, October, and an additional window starting from June. To make the most of these opportunities, it's essential to plan your study schedule accordingly. With four testing windows for discipline sections, candidates can take the exam between January 1-31, April 1-30, July 1-31, and October 1-31. Score release dates are March 14 (January), May 1 (April), September 11 (July), and December 16 (October). For core sections like FAR, AUD, and REG, continuous testing is available, offering greater flexibility. It's crucial to schedule your exams in advance to secure preferred dates. Keep track of score release dates: March 14, May 16, July 17, September 11, and December 16. The structured testing schedule for the 2025 CPA Exam includes a balance of flexibility and organization. Both continuous testing options and scheduled examination periods are available to help you plan your study schedule more efficiently. Here's a quick breakdown: Core subjects like FAR, AUD, and REG have year-round continuous testing opportunities, while specialized subjects are tested during designated times - January, April, July, and October. Score results for discipline sections are released within weeks of the examination date. This setup allows you to manage your study schedule better, giving you the chance to pass these subjects while getting timely feedback on your exam performance. The structured testing schedule for the 2025 CPA Exam significantly impacts how candidates prepare and experience the exam overall. With examinations taking place during the first month of each quarter, you can align your study plan with the exam dates more effectively. For instance, the January window runs from January 1-31, followed by score release on March 14, providing timely feedback on performance. Similar schedules apply to April and July windows, with scores released on May 16 and September 11 respectively. This organized testing approach reduces uncertainty and lets you focus on mastering discipline subjects without the stress of open-ended test periods. The CPA Evolution was launched in January 2024, marking a significant shift towards a more relevant and engaging format for candidates. Here's what you need to know: You must pass three core subjects - FAR, AUD, and REG - and can choose a discipline subject (BAR, ISC, or TCP) based on your career goals. The new exam incorporates technology and data analytics to meet industry demands, ensuring newly licensed CPAs possess essential skills for today's business environment. With multiple testing windows throughout the year and timely score releases, the CPA Evolution enhances accessibility, allowing you to plan your preparation and testing according to your needs. Effective Exam Preparation Success in the CPA Exam depends on strategic preparation, which requires a detailed study schedule that balances time management with other responsibilities. Allocate 300-500 hours to cover all sections thoroughly, using practice exams and simulations to familiarize yourself with the test format and question types. Joining study groups or enrolling in review courses can provide valuable support and motivation. Regularly assess your progress by analyzing practice test results, allowing you to identify strengths and weaknesses, and implement targeted preparation efforts to ensure success on exam day. Frequently Asked Questions Will the CPA Exam Change in 2025? Yes, the CPA Exam will change in 2025. You'll experience multiple testing windows for core subjects, while discipline sections follow specific monthly examination schedules. The 2025 CPA Exam offers enhanced flexibility and accelerated score releases compared to previous years. For those taking the exam in 2025, scores are based on uniform standards set by the AICPA, ensuring accuracy and fairness in reflecting performance. The 30-month rule allows candidates to keep passing scores for up to 30 months, providing extra time to complete sections without losing previously earned credits. Vishal CPA Exam Prep's updated materials reflect the 2025 CPA exam format, including tailored practice exams for preparation. Navigating the 2025 CPA exam requires careful planning and awareness of testing windows and score release dates. Staying organized and informed can reduce anxiety and improve success rates. The right timing and effective study strategies are key to mastering the CPA exam. Along with the day you sit for the exam, another crucial date is the NASBA score release day, where candidates learn the results of their hard work and gain insight into how much longer their journey will last. Here, we provide the 2025 CPA exam score release dates and additional details about this significant exam event. Even if you haven't taken a CPA exam section yet, it's essential to check these dates when creating your study plan. Historically, the CPA exam was available during four annual testing windows: Q1 (January 1 - March 10), Q2 (April 1 - June 10), Q3 (July 1 - September 10), and Q4 (October 1 - December 10). However, starting in 2025, the CPA exam will feature some blackout dates. The Core sections (AUD, FAR, and REG) can be taken on a rolling basis, while the Discipline sections (BAR, ISC, and TCP) are administered during specific times throughout the year. The schedule for 2025 CPA exam score release dates is changing slightly compared to previous years. Given article text here for official score release announcement. However, you can plan for the releases and better manage your stress. Since AICPA releases CPA Exam results in batches, two factors affect how long you must wait for your score. These factors are the number of score release dates scheduled for that quarter and the time at which you take the exam in testing window. When AICPA schedules fewer score release days, you have to wait longer to get your score if you sit for the exam within first two months of the quarter. In general, you'll receive your results sooner if you sit closer to the end of the window. Let's look at Q1 2024 to see how long it will take CPA Exam candidates to receive their scores. If you take your exam on January 23rd, you'll receive your score within 14 days and 2 weeks from then. Or, if you'd like to consider how many weeks, that's two months. February 14th is another release date with 11 days and one week left before the score is released. March 9th has a 9-day waiting period, followed by one week and two days. Similarly, September 7th also has a 9-day wait. CPA Exam Score Release Process As we learned from tables, AICPA receives exam data files from Prometric, testing centers that administer the CPA Exam. The AICPA then sends scores to NASBA. Finally, NASBA delivers scores to state boards of accountancy. NASBA makes score data deliveries on dates falling within testing windows. Factors for the Score Release You probably know all 4 sections of CPA Exam are computerized. So why do you have to wait so long for your exam results? It's because AICPA puts responses through multiple quality assurance reviews to ensure scoring accuracy. The AICPA ascribes a high level of importance, due diligence, and attention to accuracy in the CPA Exam scoring process. They also have systems to verify correctness of scores in special cases. How to Check CPA Exam Scores Of course, on CPA Exam score release day, most important question is "How can I check my CPA score?" Your results may come from one of two sources. Firstly, your state board of accountancy may utilize NASBA's online score retrieval service. You can visit NASBA's website on the CPA Exam score release day to get your score (aka the NASBA Candidate Portal). Not all state boards use this service, so you must check with your state board. The CPA Exam score release process has some important details to note. Firstly, the IL Board of Accountancy doesn't use the NASBA Candidate Portal for releasing scores. Therefore, it's crucial to check with your state board of accountancy soon to know exactly where to find your results on the designated score release day. If you pass the CPA Exam, you'll receive a score notice stating your overall score and credit status, along with the expiration date for any passed section's credit. On the other hand, if you fail the exam, you'll get a performance report showing your scores in each content area and by item type within 72 hours of receiving your results. The NASBA Candidate Portal will contain both your score notice and performance report. Additionally, if you scored below 75 and a performance report was generated, you'll be compared to candidates who just passed the exam (those with a score between 75 and 80). You'll also receive information about your performance on multiple-choice questions (MCQs) and task-based simulations (TBSs). A passing score for any CPA Exam section is 75, which is a scaled score. This doesn't represent the percentage of correct answers but rather a weighted combination of scores from MCQs and TBSs. The AICPA Board of Examiners establishes the CPA Exam passing score after considering factors like standard-setting study results, historical trends, and exam content changes. They also receive input from various stakeholders including NASBA consultants, psychometricians, the academic community, and licensed CPAs. With the 2025 CPA Exam adopting a Core + Discipline model, candidates must take three Core sections (AUD, FAR, and REG) and choose one of three Discipline sections (BAR, ISC, or TCP). The exam question breakdown has also changed, with MCQs making up 50% of each section's score except for the BAR and ISC sections. The credit earned from passing a CPA Exam section lasts for 30 months, during which you must pass the remaining three sections to avoid losing credit. If you fail to meet this deadline, your credit will be rolled back to the date you passed your second section, giving you another opportunity to pass the remaining sections within the new 30-month window. You should keep studying until you run out of sections because waiting for CPA Exam scores is not an option. Instead, focus on reviewing the next section before receiving the results for the previous one, so you can make progress and stay in study mode. Additionally, be aware that delays in receiving your CPA Exam results can occur due to various reasons such as processing time or your time zone. The AICPA strives to provide scores as soon as possible within their scheduled release timeline, but factors like this may affect the timing of your results. If you fail the CPA Exam, studying with a good CPA review course is crucial to improve your chances of success in the future. You should start with the first discipline section (BAR) within 12 months of your CPA Exam date. If you pass BAR, you can move on to the next discipline section (ISC or TCP). If you pass all three discipline sections, you can then focus on the Core sections (AUD, FAR, and REG). It's important to maintain a consistent study schedule and stay organized throughout the year. By following these tips and staying informed about the changes, you'll be well-prepared for the 2025 CPA Exam.