The symbol of the ram is associated with fire signs and has a positive, masculine polarity. It's considered a fixed sign, with a rising pattern that involves the head. In terms of substance, it's related to vegetables, and its varna is administrator/warrior (kshatriya). Ayurvedically, it's linked to the pitta dosha and mode of nature is goodness (sattva). Physiologically, it relates to the chest and heart area. This pattern repeats itself in different zodiac signs, with some differences. For instance, in Virgo, it's associated with earth signs and has a negative, feminine polarity. In Libra, it's an air sign, while in Scorpio, it's a water sign. Sagittarius is back to being a fire sign, while Capricorn returns to being an earth sign. Aquarius is once again an air sign. The only exception is Pisces, which is a water sign with a different rising pattern and mode of nature.
