Critchill school uniform

Friday, June 27, 2014 03:46 when we were asked by mark armstrong, the head of the school of critchill a frome, if we could help with their re-branding we jumped to the possibility. critchill school specialization is with students requiring special educational needs and having the opportunity to help show the exceptional environment that mark and his team provide work with students of such a wide range of skills was both a privilege and a dream job. the inclusivity was fundamental and from the beginning we collaborated with the students and asked if they would want to contribute their ideas to the new branding – bet they would! a guide group and a workshop were subsequently created and students responded brilliantly by providing us with an extraordinary range of ideas and possibilities. This approach really helped us with a better understanding of the requirement throughout the piece and we were now able to process some initial projects. We wanted to create a fresh and stimulating brand, full of energy and aspiration, a brand that represented the philosophy of the school, the special gifts of these children and that all things were possible - and so critchill eagle was born. this has been followed with the development of a suite of vibrant literature and brand warranty, including prospectus, construction signs, uniforms, merchandising and, of course, the carrier of the people of the school, all incorporating the surprising design that resonates with all students, parents and staff in the same way – we areto report that it was a overwhelming success. Now the fun part! – A team of Learn to Lead (of self-appointed children from all ages of the school) was organized and this team brilliantly conceived and organized a 'Launch Day' to reveal the new branding to students and parents who included a fashion show where students were able to put their things in difficulty that show their new uniform school cracking to the best advantage. Everyone had a fabulous time and students were the real stars of the show – as press releases show! Really great thanks to Mark and his team for their energy and their contribution, and especially of course to all the students of Critchill for collaborating with us on this most useful project – thanks to all. Currently working on the website so much more to come! "It was a great experience working with rhythm. They fully understand the ethos and vision of our school and how we want to represent it. They listen carefully and make very relevant suggestions and recommendations. This has allowed us to finish with a brand that we can use a long way in the future and which really represents our school. Many thanks to Nick and his colleagues."
