Sri Lanka's Traditional Knowledge and Traditional Cultural Expressions of Health and Wellbeing: History, Present Status and the Need for Safeguarding

Nirekha De Silva, PhD in Law, Griffith University
29 April 2013

Abstract

Sophisticated knowledge of the natural world is not confined to western science. Societies from all parts of the world possess rich sets of experience, understanding and explanation. My paper is an exploration of the dying secrets of traditional knowledge in health and wellbeing in Sri Lanka and an attempt to find ways of safeguarding it as intangible cultural heritage of the humanity.

I have marked the parameters of my study by exploring and defining the concepts of 'traditional knowledge', 'traditional cultural expressions', 'traditional knowledge in health', 'traditional healer', 'a healthy person' and the notion of 'wellbeing'.

Then, the paper traces the historical evolution of traditional knowledge and traditional cultural expressions. It considers the internal and external forces that influenced in evolution of Sri Lanka's traditional knowledge and traditional cultural expressions; the historical developments and achievements in traditional knowledge and traditional cultural expressions in healing and wellbeing, giving examples of ancient historical and literary sources. Diverse forms of traditional knowledge existed in medical treatment for all forms of disease including viral, bacterial and fungal diseases; all forms of surgeries; all forms of mental illnesses; and on healthy living and wellbeing of individuals and communities. Sri Lankan beliefs, knowledge, and practices have been used in healing through medical practices. Some forms of traditional healing in Sri Lanka include, Ayurveda, Keraminiya, Horiwila Kadum bidum (Orthopaedics), Rasa Shashtra, specialized indigenous eye doctors, the Homoeopathic system of medicine and Acupuncture. Local Sri Lankan beliefs, knowledge, and practices were used in protecting mental health through rituals and performances, such as pirith, meditation, bodhi pooja, wows, yoga, astrology, palmistry, healing through spirits, exorcism, tovil, charms and amulets, adi veil and hetime ritual.

The challenges faced by traditional knowledge and traditional cultural expressions in health and wellbeing due to Sri Lanka's complex social, religious and political history that mixes Sinhalese, Tamil, Muslim, Buddhist, Islam, Hindu beliefs, as well as the influences of colonization are outlined in this paper. Understanding the relevance and importance of traditional knowledge and traditional cultural expressions, various institutions and instruments have evolved in the international arena, to promote and safeguard traditional knowledge. Various aspects of preservation, protection and promotion of the traditional knowledge are looked into by many international bodies. The paper identifies the contribution of the International Organizations as well as Government Indigenous Medical System in protecting traditional knowledge in health. Finally the need to adopt and implement a more comprehensive, locally relevant and participatory plan to Safeguarding
