Routine maintenance is a crucial part of owning a boiler, and if avoided, it can lead to boiler failure. In fact, lack of boiler maintenance is one of the biggest contributors to failing boilers. Boiler blowdown is a routine maintenance procedure that can be performed daily to ensure your boiler operates optimally. One of the main reasons boiler blowdown is important is because it prevents staining of the water gauge glass. When this happens, it can be tricky to know the actual amount of water inside the boiler. The gauge may look as though there is sufficient water, when in reality, the boiler is very low on water. The safety of and boiler's performance and longevity is directly related to operating with the proper water levels. Additional benefits of adhering to a proper boiler blowdown schedule and procedures are discussed below. If you are unfamiliar with the boiler blowdown process, this post will guide you through everything you need to know, including the types of boiler blowdown and what causes problems in boilers. Boiler blowdown is a water treatment process where water is forced out of the boiler vessel to help prevent a high concentration of impurities (such as chemical concentrations, sediments, and solids). If left unchecked, these impurities tend to lower the boiler's operational capacity by insulating the heating surfaces on the boiler's waterside. Once the metal overheats, it begins to reduce the lifespan of the boiler and can cause the pressure vessels to fail. The impurities in boilers are referred to as total dissolved solids, or TDS. TDS includes both Suspended and Dissolved Solids. Dissolved solids are tiny substances that are too small for humans to notice, but remain in water such as calcium, magnesium or sodium. You may be familiar with these elements creating "hard" water. Suspended solids on the other hand do not dissolve fully in water and are usually minerals. With regular boiler blowdown, your boiler will produce high-quality steam and have a normal level of TDS. The boiler blowdown procedure requires a commitment to reading and logging vital information about your boiler. With this data, you can actively prevent scaling, corrosion, and carryover of boiler water into steam which can cause further damage to piping and other equipment. When using a boiler, the water turns to steam, and if there are any impurities or solids, they will be left inside the boiler tank. Over time, the impurities will accumulate, as described above. The boiler blowdown process involves flushing the boiler, while under pressure, to get rid of sludge and adding "makeup" water back into the boiler to compensate for what is being blown out. This process also helps control the concentration of dissolved solids in the boiler water. The frequency and duration of the blowdown procedure is affected by factors such as type of boiler, amount and quality of makeup water, operating pressure, and water treatment. The blowdown rate of a boiler differs for each boiler application, and you can acquire more information about your specific boiler from a water treatment consultant. Through testing of the blowdown water and learning more about your specific operation, they can give guidance as to how often and how long blowdowns should last. While the process might differ from boiler to boiler, here are some basic steps in most boiler blowdown processes. Step one: Open the quick opening valves, the valves closest to the boiler, which allows water to flow to the slow opening valve. The quick opening valve goes from fully opened to fully closed in one complete motion. Step two: Open the slow opening valve. The slow opening valve has five complete 360-degree turns to go from fully closed to fully open. Step three: Pay attention to the boiler's water level throughout, if you allow it to go too low, the boiler will cycle off on its level control. Multiple shorter blowdown cycles can be used to achieve the desired total blowdown time. After the valve is left open for the recommended (total) time (consult with a water treatment specialist), you are ready to close end the blowdown. Step four: Close the slow-opening valve, then close the quick opening valves. Step five: Reopen the slow-opening valve to drain the piping between the two quick and slow valves. After cooling off, confirm that slow-opening valve shut offs tight and no water is flowing from the bottom blowdown piping. The order of operating the valves is important. The quick-opening valve should always be opened first and closed last. This prevents water hammers which can damage pipes and valves. It is best practice to avoid leaving an open valve unattended since it could lead to personnel injuries. Additionally, you can perform repairs and maintenance on the slow-opening valves that are farthest from the boiler without draining the boiler. Boiler blowdown is of three main categories: bottom blowdown, surface/ continuous blowdown, and water column blowdown. Surface blowdown ensures a slow, continuous removal off the top of the boiler water level. This process can be controlled manually by setting a needle valve appropriately to control the flow of surface blowdown. This process can also be automated by use of a Sensor (conductivity), motorized valve, and controller. This method will monitor the boiler's water quality and open surface blowdown valve as needed to maintain the conductivity setpoint. Regular skimmer blowdown is effective in dealing with impurities with a minimal amount of boiler water lost to drain, hence controlling cycles of concentration. Your boiler manufacturer's literature, American Boiler Manufacturers Association, and water treatment specialist are all good resources for determining the correct boiler water quality targets. Bottom blowdown is the most commonly used method due to its effectiveness in preventing the build-up of dissolved solids. The procedure utilizes the slow and quick opening valves, as outlined above, and is what most people are referring to when talking about boiler blowdown. The valves are connected at the bottom of the boiler and are designed to remove sludge concentration that precipitates during boiling. Water column blowdown helps to control the buildup of sludge in the water level controls and sight glass. It removes impurities from the water column and gauge glass, ensuring operators can clearly see water levels in the boiler. In this process, the water gauge glass, water column, and the associated blowdown piping system and valves are cleaned out. Float type low water cutoffs have a bowl assembly, if not routinely blown down, sludge can build up and interfere with the proper movement of the float assembly. There are some additional boiler blowdown systems/components, including blowdown heat recovery systems, separators, and tanks. Blowdown heat recovery systems refer to any sort of system used to recover wasted energy. It uses the heat from the blowdown to preheat feed water before it enters the boiler, recapturing otherwise wasted energy, reducing costs and improve boiler plant efficiency. Blowdown separators are vessels designed to perform two important functions: lower the pressurized blowdown to at-atmospheric through steam flashing, they also cool the blowdown before it enters a drain by use of an aftercooler. Blowdown tanks are vessels that also reduce the high pressure blowdown to atmospheric pressure, but instead of immediately cooling and sending the blowdown to drain, they collect and store the blowdown water, allowing it to cool before going to drain. If you want to get the most out of your boiler's operational capacity, boiler blowdown should be part of your routine boiler room maintenance program. . Transportation during the 2024 Summer Olympics and Paralympics constituted a major challenge for the organisers due to the size of the event. Over €500 million was invested in improvements to transportation infrastructure for the games. A mobile app was developed to facilitate travel by offering a route calculator, and 5,000 agents were deployed at stations and bus stops to assist travellers. A goal of Paris 2024 was to halve the average carbon footprint of the London 2012 and Rio 2016 games. The organisers estimated that more than a third of the greenhouse gas emissions would be from the transport of athletes and spectators. All venues were made accessible by public transport and bicycle, with 415 kilometres (258 mi) of cycle paths created to link the venues and 27,000 bicycle racks installed. Public transport was extended and services increased. The goal was met, with an estimated 54.6% reduction, representing 1.59 million tonnes of CO2 equivalent. (Full article...) Found from the intertidal zone to a depth of 30 m (100 ft), this species is common throughout the tropical Indian and western Pacific Oceans in nearshore, coral reef-associated habitats. It is a fairly small ray, not exceeding 35 cm (14 in) in width, with a mostly smooth, oval pectoral fin disc, large protruding eyes, and a relatively short and thick tail with a deep fin fold underneath. It can be easily identified by its striking color pattern of many electric blue spots on a yellowish background, with a pair of blue stripes on the tail. This bluespotted ribbontail ray was photographed in the Red Sea off the coast of Egypt. The ceremony, televised in the United States by ABC, was produced by Glenn Weiss and Ricky Kirshner, with Weiss also serving as director. Comedian Jimmy Kimmel hosted the show for the third time, following the 89th ceremony in 2017 and the 90th ceremony in 2018.[4] In related events, the Academy held its 13th annual Governors Awards ceremony at the Fairmont Century Plaza Hotel in Century City, California, on November 19, 2022. The Academy Scientific and Technical Awards were presented by host Simu Liu on February 24, 2023, in a ceremony at the Academy Museum of Motion Pictures in Los Angeles.[5] Everything Everywhere All at Once won seven awards, including Best Picture.[6][7] Other winners included All Quiet on the Western Front with four awards, The Whale with two, and Avatar: The Way of Water, Black Panther: Wakanda Forever, The Boy, the Mole, the Fox and the Horse, The Elephant Whisperers, Guillermo del Toro's Pinocchio, An Irish Goodbye, Navalny, RRR, Top Gun: Maverick, and Women Talking with one. The telecast drew 18.75 million viewers in the United States.[3] The nominees for the 95th Academy Awards were announced on January 24, 2023, at the Samuel Goldwyn Theater in Beverly Hills, by actors Riz Ahmed and Allison Williams.[8] Everything Everywhere All at Once led all nominees with eleven nominations; All Quiet on the Western Front and The Banshees of Inisherin tied for second with nine nominations each.[9][10] The winners were announced during the awards ceremony on March 12, 2023. Everything Everywhere All at Once became the first science fiction film to win Best Picture,[11] and became the first film, alongside A Streetcar Named Desire (1951) and Network (1976), to win three acting awards.[12] Best Director winners Daniel Kwan and Daniel Scheinert became the third pair of directors to win for the same film.[a] For the first time since the 7th ceremony in 1935, all five Best Actor nominees were first-time nominees.[13] Michelle Yeoh became the first Asian winner for Best Actress and the second woman of color overall after Halle Berry, who won for her performance in Monster's Ball (2001).[14] Furthermore, she became the first woman to identify as Asian to be nominated in that category.[b] Ke Huy Quan became the first Vietnamese person to win an Oscar and the second Asian winner for Best Supporting Actor after Haing S. Ngor, who won for his role in The Killing Fields (1984).[15][16] The 42-year span between Jamie Lee Curtis's first Oscar nomination in 1983 and her win in 2023, as the Dolby Theatre in Hollywood, Los Angeles. In September 2022, the Academy hired television producers Glenn Weiss and Ricky Kirshner to oversee production of the 2023 ceremony.[25] AMPAS president Janet Yang and CEO Bill Kramer remarked that they looked "to deliver an exciting and energized show" with Weiss and Kirshner.[26] Two months later, comedian and talk show host Jimmy Kimmel was announced as host of the gala. "Being invited to host the Oscars for a third time is either a great honor or a trap," Kimmel stated in a press release regarding his selection. "Either way, I am grateful to the Academy for asking me so quickly after everyone good said no", he concluded.[27] Furthermore, AMPAS announced that all 23 categories would be presented live during the gala. The announcement came in response to an internal survey which indicated negative feedback regarding the previous year's decision to present eight below-the-line categories prior to the live portion of last year's gala.[28] In light of the Chris Rock–Will Smith slapping incident during the previous year's telecast, AMPAS announced that the organization hired a "crisis team" in the event a similar altercation or if an unexpected fiasco arose.[29] In an interview published during the 2023 ceremony, Kramer explained: "We have a whole crisis team, something we've never had before, and many plans in place. We've run many scenarios. So it is our hope that we will be prepared for anything that we may not anticipate right now but that we're planning for just in case it does happen."[30] The Dolby Theatre stage on the day of the ceremony Several others participated in the production of the ceremony and related events. Rickey Minor served as musical director for the ceremony.[31] Production designers Misty Buckley and Alana Billingsley, who were the first women-led design team for an Oscars telecast, designed a new stage for the 2023 ceremony.[32] According to Buckley and Billingsley, the stage was designed to resemble Art Deco movie places from the Golden Age of Hollywood.[33] Additionally, the set utilized several LED panels that were used to display the category names, winners' names, or images from the nominated films.[34] Notably, the arrivals area along Hollywood Boulevard outside the Dolby Theatre was lined with a champagne-colored carpet, marking the first time since the 32nd ceremony in 1960 that a non-red colored carpet was utilized for the gala. According to red carpet consultant Lisa Love, the production team chose a lighter shade of carpet color in order to not clash with a sienna-colored tent erected to shield attendees from the sun or potential rain. She also added that the shades of color both for the carpet and tent were inspired by "watching the sunset on a white-sand beach at the 'golden hour' with a glass of champagne in hand, evoking calm and peacefulness".[35] Lady Gaga was initially not scheduled to perform her nominated song "Hold My Hand" due to her commitments involving her role in Joker: Folie à Deux. On the morning of the ceremony, however, it was reported that Gaga would perform at the ceremony.[36] Meanwhile, actress Glenn Close, who was originally scheduled as a presenter during the gala, canceled her appearance due to a positive COVID-19 test.[37] When the nominations were announced, the ten films nominated for Best Picture had earned a combined gross of $1.57 billion at the American and Canadian box offices at the time. Top Gun: Maverick was the highest-grossing film among the Best Picture nominees with $718.7 million in domestic box office receipts.[38] Avatar: The Way of Water came in second with $598.4 million; this was followed by Elvis ($151 million), Everything Everywhere All at Once ($70 million), The Fabelmans ($15 million), The Banshees of Inisherin ($9 million), Tár ($5.6 million), Triangle of Sadness ($4.2 million), and Women Talking ($1.1 million). The box office figures for All Quiet on the Western Front were unavailable due to their distributor Netflix's policy of refusing to release such figures.[39] Furthermore, by virtue of Avatar: The Way of Water and Top Gun: Maverick's Best Picture nominations, it marked the first time since the 55th ceremony in 1983 that the two highest grossing films of the year were both nominated in the aforementioned category.[40] Andrea Riseborough's Best Actress nomination for To Leslie was controversial amongst critics and pundits, as Momentum Pictures, the film's distributor, did not fund a conventional advertising-driven awards campaign for the film. Instead, director Michael Morris and his wife, actress Mary McCormack, organized a "celeb-backed campaign" to get Riseborough nominated.[41][42] They contacted friends and colleagues in the entertainment industry, asking them to view the film and share their thoughts on it.[43] Morris and Riseborough also hired publicists to coordinate the efforts. While not initially regarded as a serious contender, the campaign raised Riseborough's profile; dozens of celebrities praised her performance on social media, and some hosted screenings of the film during voting for the Academy Award nominations in January 2023.[44][45] Riseborough's nomination was announced on January 24, when the Los Angeles Times called "one of the most shocking nominations in Oscar history".[43] After her nomination was announced, speculation arose that the tactics might have violated AMPAS rules against directly lobbying voters.[46] A post on the film's Instagram account was noted by several AMPAS members for possibly violating a rule prohibiting "[singling] out 'the competition' by name" by featuring a quote from film critic Richard Roeper, who praised Riseborough's performance as better than Cate Blanchett's in Tár, a fellow nominee for Best Actress.[47] On January 27, the Academy announced a review of the year's campaigns "to ensure that no guidelines were violated, and to inform us whether changes to the guidelines may be needed in a new era of social media and digital campaigning."[48] The Academy rescinded nominations for nominees who participated in unsanctioned campaigning. However, there were no reports that Riseborough had been involved in such, or that any Academy members had lodged formal complaints about the campaign's behavior.[48] On January 31, the Academy concluded its review by pledging to address "social media and outreach campaigning tactics" which they said caused "concern", but confirming that Riseborough's nomination would be retained.[49] Following the controversy, the Academy introduced new campaigning rules and clarifications in May 2023.[50] Variety columnist Owen Gleiberman wrote: "It didn't rock the boat, it didn't overstep its welcome, and it left you feeling that the world's preeminent awards show, all doom-saying punditry to the contrary, is still, on balance, a very good thing." He also added that the wins received by Everything Everywhere All at Once "lent the evening a rare sense of populist renewal".[51] Television critic Daniel Fienberg of The Hollywood Reporter similarly praised the show's emotional beats and found its flaws "were mitigated more gracefully than just about any Oscars telecast" he could recall.[52] Mick Lasalle of The San Francisco Chronicle commended Kimmel's stint as host stating: "He was relaxed for a relief to see something, anything, actually get held together." Mike Hale of The New York Times remarked on "the ordinariness and sameness of the ABC broadcast" compared to the prior year.[54] while USA Today's Kelly Lawler criticized it as "terribly fake" and felt that Kimmel's role "felt phoned in, at least maybe monitored by corporate ethicists while looking to avoid controversy" despite some of his jokes tackling controversial subjects such as the January 6 United States Capitol attack and Tom Cruise's Scientology advocacy.[55] Hale added that "the modern Oscars have become something more to be endured than enjoyed".[54] The American telecast on ABC drew in an average of 18.75 million people over its length, which was a 13% increase from the previous year's ceremony and marked the first time that the Academy experienced consecutive years of viewership increase since the 88th Academy Awards in 2014.[3] The show also earned higher Nielsen ratings compared to the previous ceremony with 9.9% of households watching the ceremony.[56] In addition, it garnered a higher 18–49 demo rating with a 4.03 rating among viewers in that demographic.[57] It was the most-watched prime time entertainment broadcast of 2023 in the United States.[58] In July 2023, the broadcast was nominated for nine awards in any of the categories for which it was nominated.[59][60] The annual "In Memoriam" segment was introduced by John Travolta. Singer Lenny Kravitz performed his song "Calling All Angels" during the tribute.[61][62] Olivia Newton-John – singer, actress John Korty – director, producer May Routh – costume designer Louise Fletcher – actress Irene Papas – actress Mitchell Goldman – executive Bob Rafelson – director, writer, producer Albert Saiki – designer Ian Whittaker – set decorator Robbie Coltrane – actor Kirstie Alley – actress Ray Liotta – actor Vicky Eguia – publicity executive Angela Badalamenti – composer Greg Jein – visual effects artist, model maker Neal Jimenez – writer, director Mike Hill – film editor Tom Luddy – producer, film festival co-founder Marina Goldovskaya – director, cinematographer, educator Christopher Tucker – special effects makeup artist Irene Cara – actress, singer, songwriter Gregory Allen Howard – writer, producer Owen Roizman – cinematographer Luster Bayless – costume designer Gray Frederickson – producer Burny Mattinson – animator Carl Bell – producer Douglas McGrath – writer, director, actor Julia Reichert – producer, director Edward Lanham – executive producer, director John Badham – director, producer Marvin March – set decorator Burt Bacharach – composer Nick Bosustow – producer Clayton Pinney – special effects artist Simone Bär – casting director Donn Cambern – film editor Tom Whitlock – songwriter Amanda Mackey – casting director Angelo Badalamenti – composer Dartigue – publicity executive Burny Mattinson – animator Maurizio Silvi – makeup artist Jacques Perrin – actor, producer, director Mary Alice – actress Gina Lollobrigida – actress Carl Bell – animator Douglas Kirkland – photographer Vangelis – composer, musician Raquel Welch – actress James Caan – actor, producer Walter Mirisch – producer, former President of the Academy List of submissions to the 95th Academy Awards for Best International Feature Film ^ Jerome Robbins and Robert Wise first achieved this distinction for co-directing West Side Story (1961).
