[2][3] Summary plot Theodore Finch and Violet Markey are two teens who want to escape badly from their small Indian city. Violet is a popular girl who secretly deals with the remorse of the survivor, and Finch is a boy obsessed with death, labeled a monster by other students. The fate brought together the two when they both climbed the bell tower at school at the same time, planning to jump from the protrusion. Finch was surprised to see Violet up there because she is one of the most popular girls in the school. However, Violet had to deal with her sister's death, Eleanor, who died 9 months earlier in a car accident after Violet suggested the home route. Violet feels responsible and hasn't been in a car since. He left the student council, then cheerleader, and struggles with the remorse of the survivor, and thinks he should have died instead of Eleanor. Finch speaks Violet and Violet returns the favor, but everyone thinks Violet is the one who saves Finch. As for Finch, he suffers from depression and experiences of almost constant thoughts of suicide during his so-called periods of Awake. Finch's family doesn't understand his depression, making him feel isolated. Softly, he writes funny facts about other people's suicides on his computer, as well as suicide methods and the best way to die. It begins a partnership between herself and Violet for a school project in which they will explore their state of Indiana's home together. Later, at home, Finch thinks of Violet, looking at her on Facebook, reading about her sister's accident (who had forgotten,) and chatting online with her. For their project,and Violet travel to Indiana to see important or unusual sites. They see Russian mountains made in the house, the highest hillIndiana (Hoosier Hill), and more. The important thing does not seem to be the sites themselves, but what the wanderer begins to mean for both—especially Violet. The two start a romantic relationship and fall in love. In the end, Finch urges Violet to enter the car and start writing again, for the first time after her sister's accident nine months earlier. She helps her talk about her sister's death, that her parents couldn't do it. As a result, Violet begins to heal. Finch, however, is getting worse. He suffers from an undiagnosed bipolar disorder and therefore, he deals with very high and very low. His behavior demonstrates the characteristic manic periods of impulsive excitability and the letarian mentality and useless during depressive periods. He is also beaten by his father and bullied at school. He also refuses to be diagnosed because labels make him feel trapped. The only bright point in her life is her thriving relationship with Violet. They wander around for Indiana together a little more; however, on an occasion by chance they stay out until the next morning, angry Violet's parents and forbid them to review Finch. This begins a spiral downward for Finch, which ends up being expelled from school. Although she still sees Violet on occasion, Finch is easily able to hide her worsening depression from her. Violet does not realize the seriousness of the situation and wonders whether Finch is losing interest in her. A particularly bad night, Finch decides to end his life. She's got a handful of sleeping pills, but she almost immediately regrets it. He goes to the emergency room and gets his stomach pumped. After that, try to get help through a suicidal support group in a nearby town. Here, go to Amanda, another girl you know from school. She's worried about Finch's suicide attempt and tells Violet. Violet is obviously worried andto help. Finch explodes, angry with herSo similar to all the others, even if it is assumed that it understands better, and the two get in a great struggle. finch escapes from home and violet seems to be the only one looking for it. sends his mysterious texts while visiting the remaining places for their unfinished project, although violet does not understand them until much later, thinking that until it was rudely cryptic. a month after his disappearance, as long as he sends an email to every person he knows, saying goodbye. violet, in panic, discovers that he drowned in the blue hole, one of their wandering sites. She goes there and finds out she's right, and she gets destroyed. Later, he managed to decode the texts until he sent it, and at the last position they had to visit together, as long as he wrote a song for her. This helps the healing process and convinces violet that Finch's suicide was not his fault. The book closes with violets that swims alone in the blue hole, where she went swimming with finch, bringing her a sense of peace. style of writing all bright places are written in a subjective style from the point of view of the two main characters, finch and violet. the novel is composed of short sections narrated by finch and violet, which generally alternate between the two characters. It was released on February 28, 2020, from Netflix, to positive reviews from critics. Trauma Theodore Finch and Violet Markey are two teens who live unhappily in a small Indiana city. Violet is quietly dealing with Survivor Guilt, and Finch is a solitary, called a monster by other students. They meet on the bridge where his sister died in a car accident nine months ago. Violet survived the accident and hasn't been in the car since. It stands on the protrusion of the bridge over what would have been his sister's 19th birthday. Finch climbs near her, talking to her from a possible suicide. It begins a partnership with Violet for a school project for which they have to explore Indiana together. Later, at home, Finch looks at Violet on Facebook, looking for her sister's accident, reading through the old Violet writing, and chatting with her online. Finch and Violet travel to Indiana to see the sites he chooses for the project. He refuses to travel by car, then by bicycle to the highest point in Indiana. For a miniature roller coaster too far to go cycling, Violet agrees to entercar. Go back to writing for the first time since your sister's death. She helps her talk about her sister, no one else had managed to do it. Violet slowly begins to heal. They fall in love. Finch, however, continues with misconduct. Sometimes she disappears for days at a time without contacting anyone. One day, while he and Violet swim at Blue Hole, they disappear under the water. When she stands up, Violet is distracted and pushes her to tell her more about herself, threatening to leave if she doesn't stick. Reveal that he was beaten by his father as a child, and that his mother is absent in his life. On one occasion, Finch and Violet stay out all night by mistake, upsetting Violet's parents. At school that day, Finch loses the character of Violet's friend Roamer, after Roamer calls him "Freak". The two boys fight in the hallway, and Finch goes to the car. Violet, who broke the battle, ends up in the principal's office with Finch's friend, Charlie. As they speak, Finch attends a support group session in a nearby town, recommended by the school counselor. There, she runs in Amanda, Violet's friend, who opens up to the group about her bulimia and two suicide attempts. Once Violet leaves school, she goes to Finch's house. Since she's still at the meeting, she talks to Finch's sister, Kate, who then leaves for work. While working in a bar, Finch comes in and pushes her to talk about their father. That makes you worry about him, even if you reassure her. Leave their house, where Violet is waiting. In his room he begged him to open it. He yells at her to leave. Finch disappears again. Violet tells her father how she and Finch met, and she expresses her concern about her last disappearance. Suggests to check in places they had visited together. Guide to the Blue Hole, where he finds Finch's clothes and the abandoned phone, and refers correctly that he hasa timeHe's at his funeral. As she healed from Finch's suicide, Violet found the map they used to travel, and noted the last position they had to visit together marked in red. It is the Chapel of Traveller Prayers, a place of rest for travellers and a place of healing for mourners. Find his signature in the guest book. Finch's gone, Violet has to present her school project alone. He reads his writing about the lessons Finch taught her. In the last scene, Violet swims alone in the Blue Hole.
