Unit 8 - Transitive & Intransitive Verbs

Transitive and Intransitive Verbs

Depending on the type of object they take, verbs may be transitive or intransitive.

The meaning of a transitive verb is incomplete without a direct object, as in the following examples:

Incomplete	Complete
The shelf holds .	The shelf holds three books and a vase of flowers.
Uncle Saud called .	Uncle Saud called the student who might be the culprit.
The child broke .	The child broke his mother's vase.

An intransitive verb, on the other hand, cannot take a direct object:

The man has survived on a deserted island.

The compound verb "has survived" is intransitive and takes no direct object in this sentence. The prepositional phrase "on a deserted island" acts as an adverb describing where the man survives.

Level 1 (Units 91-100)
1. 子供が遊んでいます。 (子供が遊ぶ)	子供が遊んでいます。 (子供が遊ぶ)
2. 子供が遊んでいます。 (子供が遊ぶ)	子供が遊んでいます。 (子供が遊ぶ)

There are literally thousands of words in the English language (and in other languages) that act as action words. the words of action may refer to something that is being done by a subject to an object - this would be a transitive action verb, u something that the subject does - this would be an intransitive action verb. But don't worry, we'll get to that. we will first start with the identification of action verbs. Here are some simple action verbs and sample phrases found in the English language: see - I like to look at the magazines, coma - you should not eat so quickly. Play - the dog plays with its new toy flavor - this apple has a good taste, smell - the perfume smells good, uga - I can hear the children crying. Look - I want to see the beautiful sunset! run - the dog runs fast, walk - we will walk towards the beach, when our action verbs, the structure of the sentence will be subject> action verb> the rest of the sentence. Let's pray the first example to break it. I am the subject; look is the action verb - in the magazines is the rest of the sentence, the magazine is a direct object, more examples of action verbs: mike is filming his brother playing in the snow, the action verb is filming and describes what mike is doing, his brother is the direct object, the dog barks, the action verb is bark and describes what the dog is doing, Candy went to the supermarket, the action verb was and describes what the sweets did, to find a verb of action, we need to find the word in the phrase that is something that someone u something can do, remember that the action can be physical u mental, if you do not havelf a sentence contains one see or not, look at each word in the sentence and see if an action can be done. Below are phrases that contain action verbs: The boys laughed at the funny clown. A cow eats a lot of herb. My colleagues chose me to be the captain of the class. The whale jumped out of the ocean. I asked the librarian for a fantasy book. The hurricane shook the ocean in a frenzy. Jen thought about the math problem. Ian reads the Bible every night. Call your mother. Denise wants a doll for her birthday. Other examples of action verbs: Approve Applause Buy Boast Crawl Scale Delivered Dedicated Coma Outlet Frown Fight Gather Giggle Hunt Hurt Imitate Irritate Jump Joke Knock Knead Listen Linger Moan Mutter Nuzzle Nap Open Organize Game Pose Citation Quibble Rant Reverse Scream Say Tickle Understand Ululate Vent Voice hiking Wander Yodle Yank Zip Zoom Voltage and Action Verbs The action verbs have been tense, tense present and tense future. Here are three examples using the verb swim. Last time: We took a dive in the cold lake. Gift tesnse: I like swimming when it's hot. Future time: Are we swimming tomorrow? Translitive Action Words Now that we are more familiar with the action verbs, we can dive a little deeper and discover the difference between transitive and intransitive action verbs. Simply put, a transitive verb is a word that shows what an object or thing is doing to another object or thing. For example: My dog ate my homework! My dog is an object, and my homework is another object. Ate is our action verb. So, joining everything, ate is a transitive action verb because an object is doing something for another object. Let's try some examples of more transitive action verbs: Lindsay kicked the jelly. My colleagues chose me to be the captain of the class. Bobby painted the purple door.
